Those interested in knowing the best practices in the sector of Personal and Household Services (PHS) in the different countries of the European Union, analyzed and selected by partners BESPAT project, can access to the Good Practices Guide in PHS through www.bespat.eu/xxxx link. This is a document in which are analyzed a set of experiences in that sector, both business cases and initiatives undertaken by institutions or administrations, and developed in Spain, Italy, Belgium, France, United Kingdom, Sweden, the Netherlands, Slovenia and Poland. These are the best practices selected and analyzed by the entities involved in that project belonging to the European initiative PROGRESS; this project is implemented by Confesal, as partner leader, DIESIS, REVES, SNS Foundation and ALDA. The study also includes an extensive annex with wider information of the best practices of this sector analyzed in the EU

Good practices guide

This has permitted a careful identification of the practices relevant for the project and the selection of the best solutions taking into consideration the context, the action and the results. These good practices are new and innovative solutions able to face the problems of the sector and to embrace the needs of people acting as care giver or user. They prove to be excellent contributions to the improvement in the efficiency of the PH Services and to the creation of new job opportunities. In general, the identified experiences fully hit the targets fixed by the project by means of a greater professionalization of workers, development of the quality of the service and enhancement of working conditions.

Moreover, their analysis shows that the sector is growing, as well as the demand for such services. In this context Social Economy seems to play a leading role in narrowing the gap between the supply and demand for jobs in the EU. In particular, the identified good practices certainly represent a key element in the implementation of the objectives of the Employment and Social Innovation (EaSI) programme.
